WHAT ABOUT KINK?

In some kink situations, it's hard to communicate because of gags or other barriers.

And in some situations, saying no is part of it!

If you agree to be submissive, does that mean you've agreed to other things?

Often partners in kink will discuss what they want to do before ever getting intimate, so that they both go in fully aware of each other's yucks and yums.

If saying no is part of the scene, partners will decide on a safeword to communicate if they want to stop.

And if someone is wearing a gag or is unable to speak for another reason, the safeword can take the form of a physical cue.

Consent is reversible and fully informed in kink just like it is anywhere else. You tell each other what you want to do and don't want to do, and if someone says they want to stop, then you stop.

I thought you might. While age of consent laws may not always be fair or always sound, they can protect young people from predatory adults.

☐ YES ☐ NO ☐ MAYBE SO CHECKLIST

A "Yes, No, Maybe So" checklist is a list boundaries, activities, and considerations for the kinds of sex YOU want to have! You can use this list as a self-reflection exercise to get a gauge on what you're interested in. You could also share it with your partner(s), assuming you trust them with so much personal information, to see where your interests overlap. Nothing you mark on this list is a commitment, just an idea of how you generally feel. It's worth coming back to this list every once in a while. What you like today might be different tomorrow!

Communication

I am comfortable with:

- ☐ Consent using words
- ☐ Consent that doesn't involve words, such as moaning, and body language.
- ☐ Guiding hands and bodies in what they are doing, and vice versa.
- ☐ Initiating or having sex while or after I have been using alcohol or other recreational drugs. If yes, please discuss boundaries here: _____

- ☐ Establishing a safeword. If yes, my safeword is: _____

What words and phrases do you like to use for things?

My pronouns are: _____

I want my gender to be referred to as: _____

I want my sexual orientation to be referred to as: _____

I want my genitals to be referred to as: _____

I want my chest to be referred to as: _____

Do you have any accessibility needs or considerations that you would like potential sexual partner(s) to know about? _____

Activities

This is a list of activities that you may or may not be interested in. Read through the list and mark off which things are a definite "Yes, I'm into that!", a definite "No, I am NOT into that," or more of a "Maybe, I'm not sure." If it's something you like thinking about, but probably wouldn't want to do in real life, mark off fantasy. If you don't feel like an activity applies to you, you're welcome to leave it unmarked.

Please note that many sex acts come with varying degrees of risk, which can be reduced with appropriate research, communication and care. A list of sex education resources is provided in the back of this book to help you get informed!
